- SMART representatives
  - Charlotte Bennett ‘17: I don’t know how many of you remember, but last semester I gave comments about how our campus can effectively respond to sexual violence. We would like to let the campus know that SMART is creating a new program, Policy Advisors for Sexual Assault (PASA). PASA will be a student-run branch of SMART’s policy committee that trains students to understand Hamilton's Sexual Misconduct Policy and related legislation. PASA students will assist survivors in filing confidential reports to Lisa Magnarelli, as well as walk survivors through the reporting/interview processes if they choose to go through with the full investigation. We're looking for a core group to be the first PASA students on campus. If anyone is interested in being part of SMART’s policy committee or wants to be trained to be a PASA policy advocate, and please email us. My email is cfbennet@hamilton.edu and Anna Brooks’ is abrook@hamilton.edu.

- Jon Stanhope: Does anyone have any questions for the SMART representatives?
  - Aleta Brown: If you have any questions and they're not here you can always ask me, and I can pass on any messages to them.

- Conor Craven: Are there any statistics specific to Hamilton on sexual assault?
  - Charlotte Bennett ‘17: The Title IX office has surveys available, but I’m not sure the extent to which they have data. The website should give you statistics about campus climate related sexual assaults. They come out with relevant surveys every few years.

- Zach Oscar: I’ve gone to SMARTs meetings, I know Jon Stanhope has been to some too, and Kureem went to a couple last semester. I think it is important to go these meetings, and that if we really care about the issues on campus then we need to show up to events like these as student representatives. As much as I would like to go to every SMART meeting, I know it’s not feasible, but I think it’s important that everyone make an effort to go to a couple so that the burden for making change does not fall on their club alone. It would be nice to get more members to start showing up to these things, not all the time, but when it’s possible.

- Jon Stanhope: Are there any other questions? Charlotte can you please remind us when your meetings are?
  - Charlotte Bennett: SMART’s policy committee meets Tuesdays at 9:00 in room 213 in the library.

- Aleta Brown: SMART’s programming committee meets Mondays around 5:00-6:00. We will send out emails. We have a lot of events coming up, and we highly recommend student leaders go to the next events we have. It will help give you a better understanding of sexual assault, and you will learn how to support survivors.

- Late Nite Jitney Weekend Issues
  - Jon Stanhope: Okay, next up on the agenda is the Late Nite Jitney weekend issues.
  - Peggy Horne:
    - Today we heard that, over the weekend, specifically on Saturday, there were a lot of issues surrounding the Late Nite Jitney. To begin, many students were asking to be dropped off at Hannaford’s instead of at the usual location outside of the Village Tavern.
    - Then, for the returning trip, people were pushing on the closed doors to the point where the driver thought the door would break. The ride-along student had to physically push students away from the doors because some people were getting pushed between the door and the crowd. While the bus was coming up to its usual parking space next to the Village Tavern, a crowd of students walked into the street, preventing the bus from getting to the curb. People were then standing in the middle of the street, preventing the bus from safely traveling.
    - On top of that, people were vomiting on the way up the hill and chanting “G-Road.” The bus sometimes makes a stop here, but it must be after the stop at Sadove. These issues can't go on. This service is not a right; it is a privilege. We use an outside company, and they can cancel this service whenever they feel it is necessary.
  - Noelle Niznik: This is a trying topic. I feel like we visit this every semester. The late night service is different because it is a hired driver and a student ride-along. We are bringing the issue up to have a discussion and see what your thoughts are. We know it is frustrating, but we are concerned about the safety of people getting on the bus. We will not leave anyone behind, but with such aggressive behavior and only 45 seats, the longer it will take to keep the loops going. This is a conversation that needs to happen, but, honestly, it is quite embarrassing based on what I heard about this past weekend.
  - Adrian Summers: Do the ride-alongs get paid extra?
    - Noelle Niknik: No, they do not, it is regular pay.
○ Adrian Summers: I think that’s ridiculous, especially for this kind of foolishness.

● Conor Craven: I was down there this Saturday when this happened, and I had never seen it that bad. I don't see what the solution is, but I think this service is necessary for the safety of our students coming up the hill. However, this weekend was definitely a bad situation.

● Harry Dubke: I think this weekend was especially crowded for multiple reasons. I don’t think we can fix the mob mentality; we need to fix the problem within the students. We can look into a public service announcement or something encouraging better behavior in an email. It is definitely a problem, but hard to find a solution for because we have intoxicated students off-campus. It’s hard for the college to talk about this issue and to find some way to get message out to the student body without chastising them. If people stop pushing and shoving, the trip will go faster.

● Aleta Brown: I do have a proposal for solution, which involves getting ride-alongs involved in one task. If they see someone being belligerent, take their name down. Then those specific people can’t ride next weekend.

○ Noelle Niznik: This is hard because many people won't give their name or they say they don't have their ID with them. There are all sorts of things that come into play, and there are cameras on bus, but not off of it. We are in the process of getting the recording from Saturday from about midnight to 2:30 AM. If I can identify anyone during this time, I will have them in for a conversation, at the very least. If we can hold people accountable, we would but it can be tricky because ride-alongs may not know all the students.

● Noelle Niznik: I would like to add that the ride-along student was badly bruised from reaching over and helping those stuck between the door. She can’t get off the bus because as soon as the doors opened, people were rushing on. Even if we had another ride-along, they also would not be able to get off the bus to direct people because the same issue would occur. This is not the image we want to promote. Remember, people were standing in the middle of the road. The driver told me that if a car came around and rear-ended the bus, the bus would have gone into the students in the road. We are exploring different pick up locations since the current location is dangerous, but we have to take into account that in certain spots, there are apartments, and we want to try to minimize noise complaints.
Ilana Schwartz: As Student Assembly, we can publicize better behavior through posters and signs. All students get the email that state the rules, but we get so many emails a day that emails are meaningless. If we make some posters and signs that have information about respect and how we're expected to act, it would be more effective. There were similar issues with Breakaway buses, but because people they knew were manning the bus, people were shockingly respectful. So, I think if we knew the ride-alongs, people would be more respectful. Maybe if we did a “ride-along of the week” in an email, we’d know the students riding along. This humanizes the person. People are not going to be disrespectful to a person they know.

Zach Oscar: We have this conversation every semester, and unfortunately, I feel that no matter what solution we come up with, the problem persists. The fact of the matter is that when you’re drunk, there’s nothing that necessarily is going to stop you. People will be disrespectful. I understand that students on campus are caring in general, but I would also be interesting in finding a way to comfortably empower both the driver and ride-along. If we set up rules so that people in the situation have ways to command the respect of people getting on the jitney, the problem could be helped. For example, the doors don’t open until everyone backs away from bus, creating order for driver and ride-along. In my opinion, no ride-along should ever get bruised again for doing their job.

Julian Perricone: I feel like the obvious answer is to get another bus or jitney. If the demand is increasing, then I feel like we need to increase the supply.

Noelle Niznik: While I see this point, the contract for the Late Nite bus is about $30,000 every year. This money comes out of the Student Activities fee, and there really isn’t any way to afford a second bus without increasing this fee even more.

Julian Perricone: Is there any system where for just one hour, there can be two buses?

Noelle Niznik: Well, what happened last Saturday isn’t a situation that has happened in a while, so it’s tough to say when we would need a second bus. However, I am already planning to run two buses for Alumni Weekend, but this is not sustainable for budget to do every weekend. We are just hopeful that behaviors change.

Kacy Hobbis: I agree that emails aren't the most effective way to get this message across. A lot of progress comes from talking to our friends about these issues and making yourself an example for your friends. We need to talk to our friends and set a good example as student representatives as a way to hopefully resolve the issue.

- Conor Craven: I think the best idea is moving the jitney location. All the students that didn’t get on the bus go back into the Village Tavern. Then, there appears to be a small group of kids waiting for the jitney, but when it comes, a huge number of kids come out of the Village Tavern. If we move the pick-up location significantly away from the bar, this problem would disappear. I think that’s the only thing that’s practical.

- Cesar Domenech: If we change the position, won’t that add a bunch of drunk kids walking around town? I personally have not been downtown at night, but I can just imagine a drunk kid walking in the middle of the road and getting hit by a car.
  - Jon Stanhope: That is definitely a concern we need to keep in mind.

- Aleta Brown: I don’t know if there’s any possible way, but I was thinking if there could be a list, students could sign up to get onto the next jitney if the seats fill up. Also, is there any way we could hire a bouncer? The problem is outside the bus where people are belligerent, but this responsibility isn’t for ride-alongs. I don’t know if that’s possible, but until behaviors stop, this is a good option.

- Harry Dubke: I understand the bus is a privilege, but it is also saving people's lives. The bus is saving the school a headache because there is a lot worse than an overcrowded jitney. While, the overcrowded jitney is a problem, changing the location drastically could have intoxicated students walking around in the cold. Without campus safety or blue lights, I don’t think it’s a good idea. If we change the location to be just a bit away from the Village Tavern, that would prevent the huge rush from the Village Tavern. If it is just out of sight of the Village Tavern, student can use TracManager to see where it is.

- Silvia Radulescu: To begin, this doesn't happen every weekend. But when I have seen it happen, I see one or two people who start the chaos, and it is the same 5 to 10 people that continue it. We don't need a bouncer or another jitney. What we need is a culture where these few people do get called out. I am not promoting public shaming, but, at the very least, we should just talk about it and put pressure to make them feel bad for being inappropriate. And, we could promote TracManager. I use it to see how far away the jitney is when I am downtown so that I don’t have to wait in the cold.

STUDENT ASSEMBLY MEETING

FEBRUARY 6, 2017

- Ben Katz: Would it possible to run supplemental drivers during peak hours?
  - Noelle Niznik: The issue here is the numbers in staffing, and finding someone who is willing to drive around at the hour. This job isn’t the most attractive. Additionally, we don’t have a ton of vans available since they’re usually reserved for clubs. Because the problem is not consistent, if we can identify busy weekends, that could be possible, but we don’t know if we can sustain it.
  - Peggy Horne: What we need to also keep in mind is that if it is about 10 people who create this chaos, adding supplemental vans takes away social time for these drivers for an issue created by very few students.

- Noelle Niznik: Can I also add that, absolutely, we will bring people to G-Road or even to Bundy, but during the really busy times the priority lies in bringing people from the village to campus. The bus brings you back to campus, lets people off at Sadove, and then will eventually bring students to G-Road and Bundy. But we have to prioritize getting people from town to campus. So just to stand there and chant G-Road ultimately doesn't help. We will bring people home, but it could be delayed.

- Samantha Gordon: Another serious problem is that people go downtown without jackets. There is this mob mentality because people are in 10º weather with no jacket. By moving jitney location and intensive use of tracking app, people will pay attention to when the jitney comes. This will create a self-selective dwindle down of who is standing outside. We should focus on more publicity for the tracking app; very few people use it.
  - Peggy Horne: Tell your friends about the app! Face-to-face interaction is better than posters.
  - Silvia Radulescu: We should also publicize the TracManager and have the username and password in the minutes.

TracManager username and password

Username: sa@hamilton.edu

Password: hamilton

- Adrian Summers: Is there a way to somehow figure out when people went down on the jitney, estimate how much time they spent down there, and prioritize based on that, who can come back when?
  - Silvia Radulescu: What if you go up with someone?
    - Adrian Summers: That's unfortunate
Harry Dubke: There are plenty of people who go downtown and either do not want to go to the bars or did not take the jitney down, but want to take the jitney up instead of walking.

Adrian Summers: We could set aside a specific time for when we should pick up people based on when they went down the hill. In a way, give priority to people if they have been downtown for certain amount of hours.

Jon Kirshenbaum: The school is in a difficult position and threatening jitney service is not the way to go about it because people rely on it. People assume that the school needs to come up with better situation, but we are going about this from the wrong end. There is no real way to legislate the behavior of drunk students, especially if we have non-assertive ride-alongs. We need to look at other ways to incentivise, not necessarily through pay, to have more ride-alongs. I don’t know the ride-alongs 70% of the time, and I don’t think “ride-along the week” won't change much. I think we should start by getting more assertive, authoritative, and better-trained ride-alongs. It’s pretty naive to think that emails or sending messages through the app will make drunk people behave rationally.

Conor O’Shea: As a former RA, I know that all our campus employees are well-trained. It is not their responsibility to step into the middle of an altercation. This situation is like the problem we have with sexual assault. We can't absolve people of responsibility just because they're drunk. If you’re with your friends, you need to hold them accountable. This bottom-up responsibility has students remain accountable for their actions. We can't let drunk people off the hook just because they’re drunk. That is not an excuse.

Jordan D’Addio: The late night bus is an important service, but there needs to be consequences for those that misbehave.

Ilana Schwartz: I dont think its worth any of our times to try to think of logistical means, like making a list, to fix the problem because that's unfeasible. I think we have to come up with other solutions and hold people accountable.

Jack Martin: How many ride-alongs are there in the Late Nite Jitney?

Peggy Horne: There’s two. One needs to be in the front, and one needs to be in the back to block the emergency exit door.

Jack Martin: Is there any merit to having more ride-alongs? I know it will take up seats, but in the interest of safety would it be reasonable to suggest more ride alongs?
Noelle Niznik: Every ride-along student can’t work every night because they're students too. Some nights they want to socialize. We just don’t have the numbers of staff to do it. It’s definitely important to consider but we run into the issue of numbers. Being a ride-along is not a desirable position, it's really tough. And I don’t think it’s an issue of the staff being more assertive because that student whom I spoke with is a very strong woman; she by no means was complaining. She was just concerned about people's safety.

Peggy Horne: Shoutout to the jitney staff and event staff! Thanks for keeping us safe. Say thanks to those staff members you know!

3. Committees

- Constitution:
  - We will be looking into future changes that can be made to the Constitution.
- DMC
  - Wednesday February 8th: 4:00pm in Bradford Auditorium - "Lester Spence: Knocking the Hustle" (collab with Levitt Center and History Department). Lester K. Spence, associate professor of political science and Africana studies at Johns Hopkins University, presents "Knocking the Hustle," based on his book of the same name. The lecture will explore the ways in which the ethic of the hustle--perhaps best exemplified in Jay-Z's 2005 declaration "I'm not a businessman; I'm a business, man"--has become a means of demobilizing and disempowering African-American communities.
  - Wednesday February 8th: 7:00pm in Kennedy Auditorium (Science Center) - "I'm not Racist, Am I?" Film Screening (kick-off of a series of events being put on this semester by the new Working with Whiteness student group on campus) I'm Not a Racist, Am I? was co-produced by The Calhoun School and Point Made Films as part of the school’s Deconstructing Race project, a larger initiative designed to transform a silenced conversation and fundamentally alter the dialogue surrounding white privilege and structural and systemic racism for students, their parents, and teachers. The film screening will be followed by a facilitated discussion.
  - Friday February 10th: 5:00pm in McEwen Dining Hall - French and Francophone Cooking Class: Moroccan Tangines (collab with the French Faculty, staff, and students are welcomed to participate in this cooking class in which the menu will include Moroccan cuisine (a French favorite!) Email was sent out today---please RSVP!

- Cultural Affairs: Meeting place TBD
  - We are getting pathway a paved through the mud at the DMC, ALCC and Philosophy buildings. Ms. Breland is meeting with physical plant to figure out what needs to be done.
    - Zach Oscar: When I was on Facilities, we talked to Physical Plant. The issue is that there needs to be a crosswalk and lighting for drivers when these paths are to be made so that they are aware of students crossing.
    - Annalie Garcia: I understand your point, and I also think we should look into a crosswalk. There is a similar path right down the hill that doesn't have a sign or anything. Maybe we can look into a sign for that path.

- Facilities: Commons 7:30 pm on Wednesday
  - More TracManager Advertisements on the way, both physical and digital via email.
  - Objectives conceived during reassessment of committee obligations divided up amongst committee members
  - TracManager username: sa@hamilton.edu password: hamilton

- Publicity: Monday 8:30 pm at Sadove
  - This week we will be taking headshots for new members and those who want retakes. Let them know if you have not contacted them yet!
    - Jon Kirshenbaum: I’ll be available after the meeting tonight for those that want their pictures taken now.

- Food: Bon Appetit is Friday at 2:30 McEwen, General committee meeting Thursdays at 12 in McEwen
  - Some organizations are curious about the meal exchange policy: As of now, how meal exchange will work is indeterminate. Bon Appetit is still deciding what the food options will be. Right now, Bon Appetit is working with organizations on a case by case basis until they finalize a formal policy for meal exchange.
  - If your team or club needs to do meal exchange for an entire weekend, you must give Bon Appetit at least 48 hrs notice (noon on Thursday for weekend meal exchange)
  - There are currently different options available for bagged lunches.
Please reach out to Reuben.Haag@cafebonappetit.com with specific questions or concerns.

Do not use items specifically meant for allergy free foods! That means that if there is a long line for the toaster or panini press DO NOT use the one designated for gluten free food. Cross contamination threatens the health of other students.

Do not put food back once it has been on your plate or after you've touched it!

Every two weeks Bon Appetit hosts “The Art of Eating” — an event with global foods every other Thursday (chicken crepe this week!)

Meetings Thursdays at noon, sign in McEwen

- Ilana Schwartz: I have been noticing that the food for display at the dining halls have had rotting fruits and vegetables. For example, I saw a basket of rotten peppers and I think it’s a waste of produce.
  - Aleta Brown: The dining staff told me that they used the food that is on display in the meals they made. They are very big on sustainability.
  - Silvia Radulescu: Why did they put them on display in the first place?

- Ram Franqui: I don’t eat greek yogurt, but I’ve been having it recently. I’ve been getting it from the greek yogurt tub. My friend tried it and told me it tasted like sour cream. So I asked commons staff, and they confirmed that it was indeed sour cream from the greek yogurt tub. Not only have I been eating bowls of sour cream, I have been preparing it and feeding it to my friends. Can we please fix this?

- Adrian Summers: A lot of people don't know this, but if you order meal exchange from Bon Appetit, you need to let your guests know that they cannot swipe into the dining hall for that meal after using the meal exchange (the meal exchange is your meal). If this happens, the person or organization that is hosting the meal exchange will be charged.

Health and Safety- Meeting place to be determined

- We are currently working on setting up a meeting with Tessa Chefalo, who organizes the freshmen orientation. We wanted to include something in the orientation, informing students that there is free STD testing in the health center.
- We have posters for the Health Center to advertise STD testing.
- We are also working on getting an all-campus email.

LITS Committee
On the Tools tab of My Hamilton, there is a new Mobile Apps channel aggregating the Apps in one place. Check it out!

Burkeshops + Tinker Tuesdays: Topics for Burkeshops this month include image and audio editing, among other things. Tinker Tuesday is a weekly program where people can learn about technology and creative applications. Tomorrow, Robotics Club is hosting.

Also--new movies are on the movie channel!

Philanthropy- Meeting place: Thursdays @ 7pm in Sadove Lounge

- Young Civic Leader Scholarship application materials being sent to Proctor High School soon.
- The Carnations sale is this week, the proceeds will be going towards refugees living in Syracuse.
- This year the scholarship will be a $1,000 award. We will be sending out applications soon.

Social Traditions- Mondays 8:30 pm at the Fireplace Lounge

- FebFest is coming up! The events will happen all next week!
- Thanks all for donating for Young Civil Leaders scholarship and for Utica Rescue Missions at our recent Hockey events.
- Shout out to Andres Aguilar, aka Fluffy for the amazing FebFest posters!

Student Affairs

- We are working on getting all our stuff published on emails and committee reports.
- We will also be sending our meeting emails to the campus with our location and time.

  Kacy Hobbis: How much longer are those lights on Martin's Way going to be up?

  - Jon Stanhope: We are working on that. The freshmen members of Student Assembly will be taking off the lights.
  - Julian Perricone: I would love to get a step-up in quality for the lights this time. If we are going to have to repurchase these every year, we should make sure the ones we get will not die out.

  Zach Oscar: Last semester we talked about an idea that I had to get Student Assembly members to walk around public spaces and ask community members if they have any concerns they would like addressed. We could have a rotating group of members that will go into public places and go up to people asking what they would like us to look into. It would be a really good way to get ourselves out there and get people to respond to us. It is a good goal for us; we don't want this to stress people out.

- Julian Perricone: Perhaps we could setup a table once a month in a place where there is a lot of traffic. We could ask students their concerns as they come by. It probably should not be super frequent.

  - Zach Oscar: A table is nice, but I think politely approaching people will be more effective. People could carry clipboards and approach students in Commons. We can just be friendly; it is easy to go up to people.

- Ben Katz: A lot of my friends read the minutes from our SA meetings. Maybe we can attach google form to the minutes so that students can send us their concerns that way?

- Ilana Schwartz: I like that idea, but perhaps we could maybe use our discretionary fund for hot chocolate and coffee to hand out on Martin’s Way. We can give students a free, warm drink and ask them what they want to complain about.

- Aleta Brown: Most of the people on campus you've seen or probably know. It’s not like we are approaching strangers. We’re here to be leaders and maybe that would be a little out of our comfort zone but I think it's important and everyone should join Zach's “task force”.

  - Julian Perricone: I’m not afraid of doing that. I just feel like that's not the best image. We don’t want to annoy people.

- Conor O’Shea: We did this in the past with the Honor Court. If we set up a table near Euphoria and have them send out the email, we get more attendance than if we send out the email on our own.

- Danny Reyes: We could also put posters or leave cards on the tables of dining halls and people can fill out forms there.

- Zach Oscar: These are great ideas, and I am attached to my original idea, but open in change in terms of how it comes into existence. I don't want this to be something that falls through.

Funding passes as recommended for French Club, HEAT, and Tennis Club.

Kacy Hobbis: For Vibes, Written and Spoken we recommended slightly less than they requested because we only fund 85% of speaker fees if the speaker fee exceeds $2,000.

Ben Katz: We should talk about changing that rule later. We should do 85% past $2,000 rather than 85% of your total request if the request exceeds $2000.

Jon Stanhope: On Friday, there is going to be a refugee solidarity rally in Utica from 4pm-7pm. Some students reached out to me about how Student Assembly could help with this event. One way that I think we can help is by providing a school bus for transportation for students that would like to go. Noelle says that she thinks the bus for that afternoon should cost around $300-$500, so I’d like to move $500 from discretionary and earmark that for providing a school bus for people wishing to go to the rally.

Funding from the Discretionary Fund passess as recommended for the bus for the Refugee Solidarity Rally in Utica on this Friday, 2/10 from 4pm-7pm.

5. Announcements

- Shoutout to those who attended the Posse Plus Retreat this past weekend. We’d love to keep this conversation going. If you have ideas, would like to come to Student Assembly to talk, or would like to work with Student Assembly to set up conversation spaces, please reach out to sa@hamilton.edu or mhorne@hamilton.edu.

- The deadline to register for the Public Speaking Competition is quickly approaching! In order to compete, you must register by this Friday at 12 PM NOON. Every student is eligible for at least one of the prizes (cash money $§$).
The competition is organized by the OCC, directed by Amy Gaffney. If you have any question, email her at algaffne@hamilton.edu.

- Ryan Bloom: There are a couple Strategic Planning Committees that are currently meeting to discuss future plans for the College. I’m on the “Imagine Hamilton” committee, which focuses on figuring out what distinguishes Hamilton from other schools and trying to anticipate and address general questions and trends in higher education. Later in the semester, there will be formal conversations and ways to give input. For now, if you have any suggestions or questions for the “Imagine Hamilton” committee, feel free to email me (ebloom@hamilton.edu), Richard Court (rcourt@hamilton.edu), or the Chair of the Committee, Vice President Monica Inzer (minzer@hamilton.edu).
