

OBAMA DENIES RUMORS THAT HE'S A FLAG-BURNING HINDU CANNIBALISTIC COMMIE BISEXUAL CANADIAN-BORN HASIDIC JEW SPACE ALIEN

Also says wife was always proud of America, except Idaho
By Mr. Leubsdorf '10

NEW YORKER COVERS DEPT.
(CHICAGO) Barack Obama held a press conference yesterday to deny rumors about his patriotism, religion, sexuality, beer preference, and iTunes music library.

"These rumors are wrong," Obama said. "I'm a Christian, I put my hand over my heart when I say the Pledge of Allegiance, and I'm not the illegitimate son of Satan and Paris Hilton. The fact that I have to respond to these rumors is ridiculous."

Obama also denied other accusations, including his alleged associations with dolphin rapists and his wife's rumored placement of the severed heads of Hillary supporters on spikes in front of their Chicago residence.

The rumors appeared to have some effect. "I'm undecided," Jack Burr '11 said. "Republicans have messed up the country, but I'm not sure I can vote for a tax-raising space squid that'll use his tentacles to suck people's brains out through their ears. But if the stock market keeps collapsing..."

"How can I vote for Obama?" Harry Weasley '12 asked. "His background scares me. How can we trust a secret wizard who's a member of a radical Christian church? Those facts clearly aren't contradictory."

The media abrogated responsibility. "Our job isn't to refute ridiculous rumors or discuss issues in depth," USA Today reporter Susan Page P'10 said. "It's to sell papers with colorful graphs about NASCAR. Americans love cars more than real journalism cause cars go vroom vroom fast." See "Obama the Hun," pg. 2

FRIDAY FIVE: COMMON THOUGHTS WHILE DOING LAUNDRY

By Mr. Yarnell '10

5. Hmmm... Maybe I should do some work while I wait for this load to finish. Then again, maybe I should use doing laundry as an excuse not to do work. Productive procrastination, baby.
4. One hour in this dryer and these clothes are still damp. After 20 extra "Super" minutes though, I would proudly donate them to a family of Eskimos.
3. Dammit, I forgot detergent. Is it wrong to use someone else's?..... Naaah.
2. Is that guy looking at my Hill Card balance? Hey, it's not my fault it works at the Pub.
1. Oh, wow. I definitely just dropped this girl's clean bra on the dirty floor. Yep, she's looking at it. Do I pick it up or leave it? I'll pick it up... no I'll leave it... wait I'll pick it up or...

STUDY: 88% OF OBAMA SUPPORTERS KNOW JACK SHIT ABOUT OBAMA'S POLICIES Yet, still a better choice than McCain

By Mr. Mahmud '11

"TRUE" DEMOCRACY DEPT.
(HAMILTON COLLEGE) A recent study shows that 88% of Obama's supporters are totally ignorant about his positions on the issues. Respondents attributed numerous policy positions to Obama that he does not hold, including support for adding Guitar Hero to high school curriculums and allotting more money for research into male-boner pills.

"Change-that's a policy right?" Dan Moroney '09 questioned. "Look, we don't actually care about policies and decisions being made. All we care about is electing someone who won't invade other countries, fuck-up the economy and sodomize the Constitution. Besides, as long as he's not a Republican we're good."

"I do so know Obama's policies!" Nathan Fessete '09 challenged. "I know exactly what he is going to do once he gets into power. Obama will solve all our problems, marry Posh Spice as his trophy wife, and create a new religion called Obamaismology. And by God, it's about damn time."

Further data showed that students were aware of basic facts about the candidates: that Obama is black, Sarah Palin is a MILF, and John McCain was born on Columbus' ship the Santa Maria in 1492.

Campus conservatives were not pleased. "That's what's wrong with these Democrats!" Stephanie Lombardi '11 roared. "If people See "Baracktober," pg. 2

CAMPUS CONSERVATIVES HUNTED FOR SPORT

Liberals take full advantage of 2nd Amendment rights
By Mr. Zappala '12

WHICH WAY DID HE GO, GEORGE? DEPT.
(HAMILTON COLLEGE) Due to recent election tensions, as well as boredom caused by the end of Humans vs. Zombies, campus liberals have made a game of hunting campus conservatives, preying on the minority with more glee than Sarah Palin shooting endangered animals from a helicopter.

"We have a points system based on the rarity of the catch," Li Ming '12 explained. "The baseline is one point for any conservative white male. For a specimen with a grandparent of a different ethnic background, it's another point. Women are worth double, as they are especially rare."

Many students took to the idea without restraint. "As a Democrat I stand up for respecting people's differences," Nikki Childs '10 commented, "but conservatives aren't real people. They're going to wish America had universal healthcare when I get through with them."

The College Democrats were unconcerned with any backlash from the situation.

"Backlash?" Barbara Kim '09 asked. "I don't care. I'm just glad to see the party unified for once."

Conservatives, a surprisingly desperate minority for an elite northeastern liberal arts college where education and the acceptance of others are promoted, have gone into hiding, albeit begrudgingly.

"I can't believe we've been forced into this position," See "Irony," pg. 2 actually knew the policies then they’d realize that both parties are exploitive and sanctimonious, which is why you go with those who are honest about it.”

Some had a somewhat more cynical perspective.
“Who gives a fuck?” John Beiber ’12 asked.
“Democrats, Republicans; neither matters in the long run. Democracy? Hah! You may as well pretend what you do and say matters. Without that, what do you have left? False hope in an abstract philosophy called change.”

tion,” Republican Kyle West ’09 roared. “First they kill children in the womb and now this. How is the GOP taking such shit from a party of sissies that chose John Kerry as its nominee? Even we knew he was the only Democrat who couldn’t beat Bush.”

“I’m heading to the Alexander Hamilton Institute, where we can hide from our enemies,” Carol Dranning ’10 announced. “To be honest, that’s not too different from what we’ve been doing for the last two years.”

However, some remained positive.
“We have to just stick it out for a while,” the delusional Jason Meeks ’10 explained, camouflaging himself by hiding in a Women’s Studies class. “John McCain will be elected, and everything will be alright. The surge will be here soon to save us, you’ll see.”

Republicans denied responsibility.
“We have nothing to do with it,” RNC Chairman Mike Duncan said. “What possible motivation do we have to run a vicious smear campaign with racial undertones, when we can run on our record of success over the last 8 years?”

“But hey, did you hear that once Obama, Bill Ayers, and Stalin traveled back in time and blinded Helen Keller with a flaming dildo, made from the ashes of American flags? I can send you an email about it...”

CAT FIGHT: WHO WOULD BE THE BEST PRESIDENT DURING AN ALIEN INVASION?

ZEALOT

By Mr. Weisenthal ’12

McCain would be the best to deal with Armageddon hands down, hands down hard. The fundamental difference between Obama and McCain is that McCain is the epitome of toughness. He’s Chuck Norris on steroids and Columbian sugar. No talky-talky face-to-face girly-man sit-downs with alien leaders without precondition. This cagey veteran knows the difference between tactics and stategy.

Scientists in very high positions speculate based on viewings of Roland Emmerich films, that an alien attack would be mostly airborne. McCain was a fighter pilot! This is a man who would get up there in an F-22 along with the average Joe Six-Pack, played by famed character actor Randy Quaid, and blast green alien brains straight back to the cosmos. If Obama was President in that situation, he’d be down on earth sitting in his armchair reading The New York Times and deliberating which tax to raise next.

Granted McCain is old as all hell, and has trouble with facial expressions, but his trigger finger is arthritis free. And suppose the aliens capture him, let us all remember ’Nam. This guy lived in a cage for five years; he can take an anal probe like W. took Wall Street: straight down the hole!

Subliminal Message: The liberal media commands you to vote Obama, or you’re a hillbilly racist who will go to hell and get cornholed by Beezlebub.

TRAITOR

By Mr. Weisenthal ’12

The fact of the matter is that we cannot take our eye off the ball. The ball, my fellow Americans, is that Barack Obama is without doubt the most eloquent orator since the bard Homer. Perhaps, might I venture, he even exceeds the eloquence of President Thomas J. Whitmore from Independence Day.

When trouble boils over, whether it’s the unstable stock market or colossal, extraterrestrial airships bombarding our panic-stricken incompletely medically insured homeland with armaments far beyond our technological understanding, I think we all can safely come to the agreement that Mr. Obama could give a damn good speech about it.

Obama’s diplomatic disposition would help establish communications with the aliens. He would ask them to reduce the burdens of the middle class while investing in the nation’s infrastructure, or create a timetable for a withdrawal of alien forces within 16 months.

Now, let us consider McCain. Save a few brief outbursts directed towards Spain and anyone under the age of 45, McCain’s banality seriously detracts from the quality of his speeches. His rigid pontifications make the most patriotic citizen fall dead asleep. As dead, might I add, as McCain could be at any moment?
