TENSIONS RISE IN MILBANK 44
Friendships ruined due to argument over ownership of leftover pizza

By Mr. Grebey '12

BASED UPON A TRUE STORY DEPT.

(MILKBANK 44) Though the end of the school year is in sight, arguments between the six residents of Milbank 44 have reached new levels and passive aggressiveness has given way to outright shanking.

“They keep the suite disgusting,” Chris Finch '11 sniped. “Because all our shot glasses are mold-ed over, they’ve been taking shots by cupping their hands. I spent hours yesterday doing dishes after I went to get a mug for coffee and found it full of chili. From the Super Bowl. In February.”

His fellow suitemates put others at fault.

“Chris is a little bitch,” Tim Broman '12 proclaimed. “Seriously, he’s worse than my mom. ‘Clean your room, pick up that trash, don’t do coke on the common room table, don’t teabag my little sister when she’s visiting, blah blah blah.’ Sheesh.”

Jason Narmouth

'12, who lives in the suite’s double with Broman, complained, “He sex-iles me almost every night. It’s outrageous. I was fine with it at first but come on. I feel like a refugee on the common room couch. I wrote Amnesty International ‘cause I know they deal with stuff like this.

“They sent me a letter back asking me to stop wasting their time with my petty problems, but that’s not the point.”

“I know this isn’t really a legitimate complaint,” George Howell '11 said, “but one of these assholes takes the foulest smelling dumps every day—it’s like there’s a decomposing animal inside him.”

Shane Daniels '10 declined to answer questions, instead focusing on repeatedly opening and closing his pocket knife while muttering about “playing that Justin Bieber song until 4:00 AM every night.”

When asked for comment, Jeanie Smithers, the custodian assigned to the suite, broke into frantic tortured tears.

Despite these problems, the four roommates who are not graduating are looking to live together next year.

“We were thinking about living in a quad,” Finch said. “I think having even less personal space would solve most of our problems.”

GREEK LIFE DEPT.

(THE GRAVEYARD) With the stunning revelation that hazing actually happens, the Administration has taken swift action to ensure that such practices (defined by the college as “any action or situation that recklessly or intentionally endangers the mental or physical health or safety of another person, or making anyone fuck a hole in the ground”) will no longer be tolerated.

TKE was placed on double secret probation after they were caught forcing their pledges to watch “really really stupid” YouTube videos and make minor and only slightly amusing edits to Wikipedia articles about lesser known presidents*... while walking over hot coals.

MASKED VIGILANTE RUMORED TO BE JOE URGO
The Boondock Saints + Batman = old dude with a beard?

By Ms. Tomkin '12

THIS IS DEFINITELY NOT LIBEL DEPT.

(BATCAVE) A masked vigilante that goes by the name of “Drunken Stupor Man” has frequently been spied on campus over the past couple of months. Students that have seen him claim that he wears a skin-tight Buff & Blue suit with a mesh cape and rides a scooter.

Though he has not made any statements to the public, his aims appear to include retrieving stolen laptops, searching for Commons’ missing dishes, and catching rogue streakers with his bare hands.

“This Stupor-Man guy makes working for Camp Po pretty easy,” Campus Safety officer Lee Neilson admitted. “Not that we ever did shit in the first place.”

In the past week or so, rumors have circulated among students suggesting that this masked vigilante is, in fact, the departing Dean Uργο.

“I mean, it really makes sense, when you think about it,” philosophy major Bill Thanker '12 proposed. “This masked hero came about just as Uργο announced he was ken up by a heavily armed Campus Safety task force.

After coming under fire when none of their pledges showed up to class for two weeks in a row, Delta Iota Kappa became magically unknowable when they voted to “go secret” yesterday. The less-than-amused Administration has vowed to find out who their secret keeper is and bring him in for questioning. **

In spite of the recent drama, most students seem to give about 0/100ths of a shit.

“Pledging isn’t always a bad thing. I actually think it’s pretty funny to see people dressed as superheroes or performing live theater in Commons,” William Carlos '11 explained. “The DU pledges’ recent performance of Menopause The Musical was beautiful. It brought a tear to my eye.”

Relatively chill dude Will Brogastic '12 commented, “In the end, if these people want to do stupid, degrading things so that they can be allowed to hang out with a bunch of people who like to force freshmen to do stupid, degrading things, then they should go right ahead. We’re all adults here, right?”

*Fuck Chester A. Arthur

leaving. And, I mean, what superhero besides Uργο would choose to travel by scooter? Besides PBX pledges, I mean.”

“Yeah, I believe it!” Leila Tierny '13 exclaimed excitedly. “That explains why he’s always reading The Daily Bull! He must be looking at the Lost and Found section for new mysteries! This is so exciting! I’m gonna go tweet about it!”

While Uργο does not appear to have any known super powers, sources claim that he is able to summon his anthropomorphic scooter at will and transform into the Martin’s Way Cat to escape predators and/or fuck with us.

Some students, however, are skeptical about the rumor.

“He doesn’t have superpowers!” drunk frat bro Ronny Flanders '10 slurred. “I can drink... gah...26 beers in an hour...but that durzen’t make me a superhero, its makes me...pee a lot.”

Nevertheless, Uργο has denounced the claim.

At that moment, a light transmitting the letters “DSM” appeared in the sky above our heads.

At that, Uργο hopped aboard his (magical?) scooter and fled the scene.

OUTSIDE-THE-BUBBLE NEWS

Bytesized news for bytesized minds! BORN IN THE U.S.A.

New York, New York

The New York Society Library charged George Washington $4,577 in late fines for two books he failed to return in 1789. The two books were Twilight: Breaking Dawn and Thomas Jefferson's collection of penis jokes, Life, Liberty, and the Pursuit of Dildos.

Durham, North Carolina

The President of Duke's College Republicans Club was impeached after its E-Board discovered he was openly gay, thus violating Part 44, Clause F of the group's Constitution, "Any same gender boning is only acceptable if the E-Board member in question feels a deep sense of revulsion and self-loathing afterwards."

A Cornfield, Iowa

An Iowa State student disappeared for a week before his corpse was discovered in an academic building, shocking Hamilton students who finally realized what is probably causing that stench in Benedict.

THE WHOLE WIDE WORLD

Reykjavik, Iceland

Air travel throughout Europe was shut down after the massive eruption of the Icelandic volcano Eyjafjallajokull,* thus beginning the movie 2012.

Joe Biden, "Why is 2012 always on the Movie Channel?"

London, Britain

The Liberal Democrats, out of power for nearly 80 years, made a late surge in the polls, threatening to upset the Tory and Labour parties with its promises to improve afternoon tea by adding scones and "droll conversation."

UPCOMING DRUG HOLIDAYS

By Mr. Hess '13

Greater than Christmas, Hannukah and Hari Raya Puasa all put together, 4/20 is a date given to us by the gods for us to celebrate all that makes this world great. In case you missed out on this blessed event, here are few more lesser-known holidays coming up that can fill the void.

International Orange Soda Day, May 3rd

Who likes orange soda? Everyone likes orange soda! Is it true? They do, they do, they fucking do-ooh. While not technically a drug, you can mix in some cough syrup for a delicious, hallucinatory cocktail. Relive those days back in middle school when you used to try to get high off the glue bottle when the art teacher took her smoking break.

National Masturbation Day, May 7th

Holy shit! This one actually exists! Screw drugs; this can be done over dozen times a day and is virtually free. Greatest fucking day EVER!

The Heroin and Unprotected Sex Happy Hour, June 11th, 11pm to 12am

Shoot up but don't suit up. For one hour, take the time to strike down social boundaries and take off sexual barriers. It is quite possibly the greatest combination since Bert and Ernie, but minus the homoerotic tension.

Shroomy Tuesday, first Tuesday of July

Remember back in grade school when they made you go through that D.A.R.E. program and they told you that all drugs were bad for you? Use this day to send a collective "fuck you" to your ol' D.A.R.E. representative for a day full of perfect highs with no downside. And they told you it was impossible...

A Shroomy Tuesday gone bad

The Ambien Long Weekend Challenge, first weekend in August

While unfortunately still not legally recognized by the United States government, the ALWC still ranks up there as one of the best ways to spend a weekend. Step one, take a dozen Ambien Friday afternoon. Step two, trip. Step three, sleep through Monday.

Reward: $17.31 and a very sexy night with Mr. Zappala '12.

NEW CLASS AND CHARTER DAY RULES

- All personal containers are banned, except for special school-supplied water bottle that will be coated with special alcohol detectors. Any student who attempts to put alcohol in them will be summarily shot. To pay for the bottles, $2,000 will be added to each student's tuition bill.
- The annual "let's hang sub-free kids from the windows of Kirkland and throw beer cans at them" ritual is now banned.
- All students are required to stop by Commons at 3pm to eat their vegetables.

Any roughhousing will result in a time-out, the length of which will be determined based on the offender's age (one minute for every year).

- All large gatherings of students besides the Passion Pit concert are banned. Any group larger than five will be broken up by riot squads.
- Campus Safety will ask people to disperse if policies are violated or if they feel a gathering is becoming large and unsafe. As usual, however, they will be ignored.
- The picnic outside Commons where shitfaced students talk to their professors will continue on schedule.
