RESLIFE REVEALS HOUSING RUN BY TANTRUM-PRONE DEMIGOD

Prepares annual sacrifice of Wertimite
By Mr. Wesley '16

LAST CHANCE AT SALVATION DEPT.
(ELIHU ROOT HOUSE) Finally acknowledging that they have less than one iota of control over the campus housing, ResLife admitted that the housing process is actually run by a supernatural being of inconceivable power, with a much more conceivable, and short, temper.

When confronted about this development, Director of Supernatural Relations in ResLife Geraldine Butler said, “Yeah, uh, back in 1988 I was called in to deal with the angry spirit of Kirkland who hadn’t gotten the memo that Kirkland was gone. To calm her down, we helped her file the paper work necessary to officially change her name to Azebithoh the Fearful.”

Since then, the Omnipotent Spirit that supercedes time and space has been relatively calm, but has been known grow angry whenever someone doesn’t bend to her will. The most recent fit began when DIK pledges ventured too far into the Glen master when Randi Taylor ’18 was repeatedly disfaced by her roommate’s persistent sexual endeavors.

Sexile Wars Dominate Campus
Health center runs out of condoms
By Ms. Hawkins ’18

Sex Education Dept.

(KEEHN 400) A full-on sexile war began last semester when Randi Taylor ’18 was repeatedly disfaced by her roommate’s persistent sexual endeavors.

“Once, she even locked me out when I went to take a shower,” Taylor explained, grimacing as she inhaled the fumes of someone’s ass naked. Especially when you have people over. One roommate who is totally okay walking around ass naked. I just couldn’t take it anymore. So I decided to get revenge.”

“Once, she even locked me out when I went to take a shower,” Taylor explained, grimacing as she inhaled the fumes of someone’s ass naked. Especially when you have people over. One roommate who is totally okay walking around ass naked. I just couldn’t take it anymore. So I decided to get revenge.”

“Once, she even locked me out when I went to take a shower,” Taylor explained, grimacing as she inhaled the fumes of someone’s ass naked. Especially when you have people over. One roommate who is totally okay walking around ass naked. I just couldn’t take it anymore. So I decided to get revenge.”

“I heard about it from my friend,” Jaime Hunter ’15 stated, stuffing condoms into his back pockets. “My roommate was always kicking me out so his girlfriend could come over. At first, I didn’t mind because I don’t like the smell of chick all over my sheets. But then I realized that I wanted to screw in my own bed. If a freshman could reclaim dominance, then so could I.”

There are students who love the idea of friendly competition and sex, but others have been fazed. “I think holding our events on the Map will really overcome the barriers that taboos like this build,” he explained.

“Trespassing on her territory really pissed her off, especially after two of the pledges she ate gave her indigestion,” Butler commented. “In the past, she would just send some more shitty weather our way to blow off steam, but honestly, the last time the Great Divine One was this angry, we had to get rid of Greek housing.”

“Our best guess is if we sacrifice a student, we might be able to keep the dark side dorms intact. We originally considered picking the sacrifice via Hunger Games-style lottery, but since Wertimeter is basically the leper colony of campus and full of freshmen, we decided to just take a kid from there.”

According to Jeff Dougie, Hamilton’s claims adjuster for any deity related damages, even if this does work, Azebithoh will probably rise up, rain hell fire upon the campus for three years, and get rid of some good senior housing. But the real problem will be that once she’s done using her powers to redo the layout of all the remaining buildings, all available housing will be sub-free triples, and everyone will be placed with at least one roommate who is totally okay walking around ass naked. Especially when you have people over.

Next Year’s First-Year Experience Events to Be Held on Map
Because who’s trying graduate, really?
By Ms. Whitmer ’18

SHOULD HAVE GONE TO WILLIAMS DEPT.
(FA R AWAY FROM THE MAP) After implementing the First-Year Experience (FYE) this academic year, coordinator Tessa Cheñalo has announced that the program will serve the new students on campus next fall with an unexpected twist: all of their events will be held on the Map.

Chêñal stated, “We feel that spending all of our time on the Map will allow the first-years to form a strong sense of unity. The Class of 2018 loved going to Wellin Hall for literally every event we held, and the Map just felt like the appropriate location upgrade.”

“In addition to our informational sessions covering fire safety, hook-up culture on campus, and how to fend off the abominable snowman in the Glen, we’d like to hold events that will allow the students to really jump-start their journey to Knowing Thyself,” Cheñalo added. The program’s leaders have already booked two magicians and a palm reader to provide entertainment in the first weeks of classes.

When asked about how the superstitions surrounding the Map may affect event attendance, Cheñalo replied, “I actually have no idea what you’re talking about. Unrelated, but do you have any anti-itch cream? I found the strangest rash on my arms after taking measurements of the Map this morning.”

Returning FYE Leader Jeremy Clark ’16 was also unfazed. “I think holding our events on the Map will really challenge societal norms on campus. It’s important to break down the barriers that taboos like this build,” he explained. “Also, I have a lot of classes in Benedict, and I think walking across the Map would really cut down on my travel time.”

After a competitive application process, the program announced that Jackie Dawn ’18 would help welcome the Class of 2019 to campus this fall. Dawn stated, “I was one of three first-years who showed up to the FYE formal dance in September. A great turnout, for sure, but having the dance on the Map this year will surely draw a bigger crowd.”

Early Decision admits are less than thrilled about the prospective program, however. Rebecca Grently ’19 commented, “I actually wish my acceptance wasn’t binding. Literally the only thing I even remember about my campus tour is how important it is to avoid that fucking map.”

SEXILE WARS DOMINATE CAMPUS

Health center runs out of condoms
By Ms. Hawkins ’18

Sex Education Dept.

(KEEHN 400) A full-on sexile war began last semester when Randi Taylor ‘18 was repeatedly disfaced by her roommate’s persistent sexual endeavors.

“Once, she even locked me out when I went to take a shower,” Taylor explained, grimacing as she inhaled the fumes of someone’s ass naked. Especially when you have people over. One roommate who is totally okay walking around ass naked. I just couldn’t take it anymore. So I decided to get revenge.”

“I heard about it from my friend,” Jaime Hunter ’15 stated, stuffing condoms into his back pockets. “My roommate was always kicking me out so his girlfriend could come over. At first, I didn’t mind because I don’t like the smell of chick all over my sheets. But then I realized that I wanted to screw in my own bed. If a freshman could reclaim dominance, then so could I.”

There are students who love the idea of friendly competition and sex, but others have been fazed. “I think holding our events on the Map will really overcome the barriers that taboos like this build,” he explained.

“Trespassing on her territory really pissed her off, especially after two of the pledges she ate gave her indigestion,” Butler commented. “In the past, she would just send some more shitty weather our way to blow off steam, but honestly, the last time the Great Divine One was this angry, we had to get rid of Greek housing.”

“Our best guess is if we sacrifice a student, we might be able to keep the dark side dorms intact. We originally considered picking the sacrifice via Hunger Games-style lottery, but since Wertimeter is basically the leper colony of campus and full of freshmen, we decided to just take a kid from there.”

According to Jeff Dougie, Hamilton’s claims adjuster for any deity related damages, even if this does work, Azebithoh will probably rise up, rain hell fire upon the campus for three years, and get rid of some good senior housing. But the real problem will be that once she’s done using her powers to redo the layout of all the remaining buildings, all available housing will be sub-free triples, and everyone will be placed with at least one roommate who is totally okay walking around ass naked. Especially when you have people over.

In this issue: “When I see freaking Sesame Street I know to sneeze into my elbow!”

This Issue Brought to You By:
The Gym

You’re here now; you won’t be in two weeks.

Hampton Presidential Hopefuls
Milbank Bear King

“Grrrr taxa grrrr arghh aesthetic discern-ment rooaaar grrrr divestment.”

GROUNDHOG DAY FORECAST

TUESDAY

We’re so Meta

High probability Bill Murray won’t let you drive.

90% chance you ride shotgun with Bill Murray.

“Bill, slow down!”

TUESDAY

So Meta

TUESDAY

Meta

WORDS ON PAPER

(We just want to be included)
Phineas P. Wurterbottom Responds: To Allegations

I wish to address a malicious rumor about my actions on the date of July 11, 1804. It has been widely circulated that Phineas P. Wurterbottom, failed to uphold my duties as the dueling second of my dear friend, Alexander Hamilton—or Ham, as I called him. That is, when the contemptible Aaron Burr stole the life of this sweet school’s founder, I, rather than avenging my friend’s honor, did chicken out.

My loyal readers, this is nothing but fallacious slander, a low attempt at character assassination. If anyone should approach you touting this calumny, I urge you to throw down the gauntlet in my name. Merely proclaim, “The honor of the Wurterbottom house shall be avenged!” and I will fly to the scene, ready to take up the challenge myself! Phineas P. Wurterbottom does not abandon his defenders!

And to my scurrilous detractors, I say you know nothing of my stoicism in the face of danger. I have stood bold before terrors that would haunt the most violent ruffian’s nightmares. (Good old Ham would vouch for me, if he weren’t so inconveniently dead). Why, only last week, armed with naught but a broom, I fended off a dark-winged bat—likely of vampiric nature—that had taken up residence in my attic.

Does that sound like the work of a pusillanimous coward? Like someone who would flinch at the first sound of matchlock-fire and jump into the nearest gooseberry bush to hide? Not that such action would have been wholly unwarranted. After all, should not a man preserve his own life rather than toss it out on a lost cause?

Oh, hollocks to that. Yes, I ran away. There, are you satisfied? Not that any of you yellow-livered cod-swallows would have had any more courage. Anyway, it should never have come to me; Ham shot first. If he had bothered to aim, he would be alive and I a hero for supporting him.

By Wilhelm Skrutterbauer ‘16

Guy is Actually EATING A LIVE MONGOOSE:

Are you blind?! Wait. Seriously. No. No no no no no. This is not okay. Are you seeing what I’m seeing? Paul Fildelebouce ‘16, Hamilton’s last hope for artistic relevance, has commenced a legitimately bow—shaking performance art installation in the foyer of the Kennedy Center, and all anyone has done is wail about their weak stomachs and deride the man who is unequivocally the future of art.

It’s just a mongoose, people! Were artists not so daring, we would’ve been lucky to surpass cave drawings. Without the intangible gifts of artists like Fildebouche, Duchamp’s urinal would have tarnished the attic.

The legion of philistines masquerading as the Hamilton student body never fails to get my fig leaf in a twist. Paul Fildelebouce ‘16, Hamilton’s last hope for artistic relevance, has commenced a legitimately bow—shaking performance art installation in the foyer of the Kennedy Center, and all anyone has done is wail about their weak stomachs and deride the man who is unequivocally the future of art.

It’s just a mongoose, people! Were artists not so daring, we would’ve been lucky to surpass cave drawings. Without the intangible gifts of artists like Fildebouche, Duchamp’s urinal would have tarnished the attic.

The reason is this. There’s a half-dead mongoose on our campus, and it’s visible from College Hill Road. Can someone outside of the art community explain to me why this passes as art? It’s barbaric, and the bib, while a relevant hashtag to consider, is not necessarily reflective of staff opinion. If you are interested in discussing this article, please email duel@hamilton.edu.

By Phil Estine ‘16

Edited by Mr. Lanman ‘15

http://students.hamilton.edu/duelobserver/