SOPHOMORE STILL WAITING FOR BUS TO 12 NORTH

“It’ll be here any minute.”

By Mr. Wright-Schaner ’23

PATIENCE DEPT.

(KJ CIRCLE) Every October 31st, Hamilton students organize a gathering at the local bar, 12 North. While some recognize the day as Halloween, real patriots know the day as when Mount Rushmore was completed. The theme of the event was halloween, though.

This past Halloween, many students came to KJ Circle, costumed, to wait for bus transportation. While many successful boarded the bus, fifteen partygoers were disappointed to hear that this bus had reached capacity, among them Greg Tramp ’23 (Joker costume).

“What are we going to do?” said Crissa Breakdance ’25 (fairy costume). “Is anyone sober enough to drive?” said Brett Arm ’25 (alcoholic costume). After several minutes of commotion, Tramp spoke up: “I think we just wait it out.”

The fifteen party hopefuls buckled down and bided their time until their chariot arrived. They shared personal stories of tough experiences.

Breaking down in tears, Kate Bate ’25 bawled: “People always see right through me, and I’m sick of it” (ghost costume). “I just feel like I’m nothing more than a stereotype of myself,” Jacob Rosenblatt ’26 said (mensch costume). “I feel like a joke in someone else’s story,” said Poop Poop ’24 (poop costume). Tramp facilitated this conversation, using his Psychology major knowledge and harkening on his experience of being a “really fucked up guy like a guy who is just so fucked up in the head and has to wear a mask because people would not be able to tolerate the real Greg Tramp ’23 (Joker costume).”

1 a.m. came and went, and slowly but surely, everyone decided to head home. All but Tramp. As of March 3rd, 2023, Tramp still sits in the KJ Circle, waiting for the 12 North bus. He hasn’t gone to class, he scavenges for squirrels and berries without leaving the traffic circle, and his phone died a long time ago, so he lost all of his streaks. The Duel caught up with Tramp and asked about his motives for staying. He claimed: “They said first drinks were free, and once you get in there, they’re like 10 bucks. In this economy? To me, that’s worth it.”

PRANKSTER GREASES CAMPUS

FebFest Groundhog did predict an early April Fools’ Day

SLIPPERY WHEN WET DEPT.

(ON THE STAIRS GOING “WOAH WOAH WOAH!”) Chaos erupted across campus Wednesday morning, as students awoke to every floor, wall, and object covered in a thick layer of grease. Students literally slid out of their bed and across their room, bumping into their roommates, constituting the most interaction they’ve had with them thus far. “I woke up at 8:40 a.m. for my fucking 9:00 a.m. biochem class. I just wanted to meet up with some friends, go down the hill, get a McMuffin, check in with my friends at The Rock, ask them about their evening, laugh a little, love a lot, get back in my car, buckle my seatbelt (click it or ticket!), go back up the hill, and do my best to arrive 15 minutes after class begins to avoid hearing my professor drone on about the KREBs cycle, only for all the grease to slide me out of room, down the stairs out of Carn, and straight into the Science Center into my desk,” Greg Marmalade ’24 said.

Some students have suspiciously come prepared for the greasing of campus, particularly the brothers of Delta Iota Kappa, who live in a cowpen in the woods behind Bundy. “Just because we happen to have anti-slip boots and there’s a mountain of empty grease cans in the woods by us does not mean we spent an entire night greasing campus. That hill is steep; we need traction! And concerning the grease, it’s a sex thing! I promise!” the toga-clad and grease-covered John Belgushi ’23 said.

Journalist at The Spectator conducted a thorough investigation, and they were able to discover the culprit of the greasing: Student Activities. “Well, you caught us,” Dean of Student Activities Vernon Busybody said. “We thought that we might make it extra difficult for students to find one of our ten dollar Mistuba coupons we hid on campus, so we made our underpaid student employees fly across campus with grease. Nonetheless, some gung-ho Freshman still found it within five minutes after sliding out her room. I guess she can look forward to Doordashed shrimp tempura.”

AXB ANOUNCES TRIP TO MY BROKEN HOME

Are you on Mom or Dad’s side?

By Ms. Batal ’23

ANTISOCIAL SERVICES DEPT.

(SECOND FLOOR COMMONS BATHROOM) Over the past few years, Hamilton College’s Alternative Spring Break program has offered students opportunities to serve their community. From rebuilding homes in South Carolina to infiltrating conversion therapy in Guadalajara, Hamilton has shown its ability to create change. This break, AXB has announced a new trip focused on divorced families: Fix My Broken Home, where students research and therapize the inhabitants. Through the support of GSU, Pep Toebismal ’24 has offered their home(s) up for the trip. “I hope this helps students understand the roots of daddy/mommy issues,” Toebismal said.

Students will spend five days at the Toebismal household, and two days at the Toebismal-Smith household. “People got bored of fixing houses or whatever,” trip leader Margarita Drinker ’23 says. The Toebismal household offers an inside look at an absent father, giving students the chance to analyze his impact on his children’s body dysmorphia and distrust of male figures. They also get to swim! “I think it’s great that my daughter, um I mean my they, is offering up the home. Hopefully this will give her an excuse to visit,” Dan Toebismal exclaimed, watching Fox News and stimming.

The final two days of the trip will be spent at the Toebismal-Smith household, which will provide a juxtaposition to the Toebismal home. Students can expect a loving environment under Toebismal’s mother, as she provides an amazing experience for the visitors while proving once and for all, that men ain’t shit.

Currently, the trip has about fifty sign-ups and counting. They hope to continue this particular trip in the future, as so many students at Hamilton have personalities based off of parental issues. “I thought AXB was the ATX rush,” Sara Kwunt ’26 sneered.
