April Fools! This Year's Great Names Speaker Has Been Mitt Romney All Along

YODAPEZ RECREATE BUSH 9/11 WHISPER WITH OBAMA "Sir, Hamilton is under attack"

By Ms. Mannes '26

TRYING TOO HARD DEPT.

(FLORIDA PUBLIC SCHOOL SYSTEM) On Thursday April 3rd, 2025, one of the most monumental days in Hamilton College history, former president Barack Obama visited campus as the Great Names speaker. The field house was packed with students, faculty, staff, community members, and familial freeloaders. President Tepper stepped onto the stage. Everyone held their breath expecting that he would introduce the guest of honor. Much to their dismay, Tepper introduced acapella group after acapella group to "sing" for the disillusioned crowd. Eventually, he stood up and introduced Obama who walked onto stage wearing a black suit with a powder blue dress shirt and a red tie. The crowd went ballistic, just like he did in Yemen.

About 25 minutes into his discussion, when half of the crowd had already zoned out, Hamilton's only improv comedy group, Yodapez, struck. A student ran on stage and leaned in to whisper something to Obama while another student quickly took pictures. Secret Service agents were quick to capture the two students who, instead of protesting, started screaming "yes, and." "We were really disappointed that we hadn't been invited to perform like the other groups," explained Yodapez president Noelle 'Señorita Awesome' Wilde '25. In classic improv fashion, the troupe decided in their GroupMe to recreate the famous George H. W. Bush being informed about the 9/11 attack photo upon seeing Obama wearing the exact same outfit. Troy Martinez '26, the Yodapez member who ran on stage, was detained in the Campo holding cells. The troupe member who took the photos, unknown, is now on the run and considered a fugitive of the state.

Since the event, students and faculty have been ruminating not only on Obama's wise words but also on what was whispered to him. Some believe nothing was said at all; many students think they said something insanely horny. It will remain unknown for now as The Duel Observer was unable to talk to Martinez while in Campo custody. Since the incident, Yodapez has received a lot more attention than they ever thought they would. "Our last improv show, which was two days after Obama's event, had a record number of attendants at 23 people!" exclaimed Wilde. The group has started selling the recreated photo on stickers, T-shirts, and even tote bags.

OBAMA WALKS OUT TO "FINEST GIRL (BIN LADEN SONG)"

Not the entrance we were expecting, but the one we deserved

By Ms. Stillman '27

SHE WANTED TO FUCK ME HARDER THAN THE US GOV. FUCKED BIN LADEN DEPT.

(FIELD HOUSE) This Thursday, Former President Barack Obama made his mark on Hamilton. "He is the first Great Names speaker to ever request a song be played as he walks on stage," explained Runnin Daset, who was in charge of setting up the event. "He was very insistent that he would walk out to 'Finest Girl (Bin Laden Song)' by The Lonely Island." What Obama did not mention was the dance he planned on performing along with it. It was an odd mix of strutting, shaking ass, and his hips thrusting every time the song said 'fucked Bin Laden.' "It was unusual, but the crowd cheered louder than for any Great Names speaker we have ever had in the past," exclaimed Daset.

Great Names interviewer Asher Mykweshtuns started the interview by asking Obama what inspired his musical entrance. "I wanted to give the students a show. They listen to droning lectures all day, and I wanted to contribute to that as little as possible. Well, I did drone a lot as president. 563 times to be exact," Obama responded. "Did you know that I fucked Bin Laden? He was fucked the second he saw our strong, brave soldiers hold that gun to his head. He was really fucked. I sent them there. I fucked him. Hard."

Throughout Obama's interview, there was frequent mention of Bin Laden. When asked about President Trump's elimination of the Department of Education, Obama stated that he thought it was "bad" and that "it is a basic right for every American to have access to a high-quality education. Bin Laden can't get a high-quality education because we fucked him so bad. We can't just fuck the average American like we fucked Bin Laden. The average American is not Bin Laden."

Similarly, when asked his take on the Trump administration cutting science funding, Obama stated that it was "unfortunate that less funding will be going to figure out how we could fuck Bin Laden even worse in the unlikely event he returns from the dead. I was thinking pegging him would be effective. Against the wall, I mean." Obama then demonstrated with a student volunteer, who he held against the wall by his wrists. "Now imagine that instead of my wrists there were specially designed metal pegs holding him against the wall. With him pegged, someone else may step in and, like, tickle him or something. And then they shoot him," Obama explained with pride.

After 45 minutes of interview, Obama had spoken about little other than Bin Laden, even devolving to simply repeating the lyrics of "Finest Girl (Bin Laden Song)" as responses to questions of various subject matters. "I felt defeated at that point, so I asked Obama to elaborate more on the manhunt for Bin Laden," Mykweshtuns explained after the interview, which lasted two hours longer than planned.

THE ENTIRE PLOT OF GET OUT HAPPENS TO OBAMA AT HAMILTON

The Hamilton College Democrats are apathetic as always

By Mr. Williams '28

RACISM DEPT.

(TEPPER'S AMERICA) Despite everyone on campus agreeing that they would have voted for him a third time if they could, President Obama has experienced the entire plot of Jordan Peele's Get Out while visiting Hamilton College. Insider sources say Barack took the trip here to try and fulfill his lifelong dream of getting pussy from a bisexual leftist woman, and he felt that Hamilton's dark side would be just the place to find it.

Despite the campus being located in an idyllic part of upstate New York, the former president immediately felt that something was off at Hamilton. The uneasiness could have been because when he came near any of the students, sometimes their eyes turned jet black and their heads swiveled up to 180 degrees to look at him, or it could have come from the asbestos. We interviewed one student, Ima Gawkin '26 who said "Whenever I saw him around campus, I couldn't help but watch him. Something about him just set him apart from everyone else here. Also, it just so happened that whenever I looked at him my vision would start to become red and my ears would begin to ring." Many other students, particularly those on the light side, described a similar Obama-induced psychosis upon him entering their field of vision.

Earlier this week, before the incident, The Duel Observer got the chance to ask President Obama about his experiences with Hamilton students, and he was quoted saying "Everyone here who isn't bleeding from their eyes from looking at me is so on edge trying to convince me they aren't racist that it's a little exhausting. I couldn't tell you how many times I've been told that the college couldn't be racist, since Ulysses S. Grant's grandson's body is buried in the cemetery here." Unfortunately, The Duel couldn't ask Obama any more questions, as right after this he was whisked away by President Tepper. It has now come to light that immediately after this interview, Tepper hypnotized Obama with his spinning bowtie, and forcibly transplanted his brain into Obama's body. President Tepper, now occupying Obama's body, claims that "this had nothing to do with his race, I simply felt inferior having a higher-ranking President on campus." Unfortunately, as a result of the operation, Obama's consciousness is now permanently trapped in the realm known as the "sunken place," AKA Bundy East.

The Obama Family Accidentally Texted Me Its Freaky Plans

Hamilton found out shortly before 1:30 p.m. eastern time on February 18 that Barack H. Obama was the next great names speaker.

I, however, knew two hours before the first emails dropped that the announcement might be coming. The reason I knew this is that Michelle Obama, the prolific activist and author, had texted me the former president's freak plans at 11:44 a.m. The plan included precise information about kinky plans, including bondage and edging.

This is going to require some explaining.

On Monday, January 20th, I received a connection request on Signal from a user identified as Susan Rice. While I had no reason to believe that Obama's national security advisor would actually be reaching out to me, I had no real reason to decline, either.

Two days later—Wednesday—at 4:28 p.m., I received a notice that I was to be included in a Signal chat group. It was called the "Hamilton goonsesh small group." The participants: Susan Rice, Michelle and Barack Obama, and, inexplicably, Steven Tepper.

Minutes later, the first message arrived, from Michelle: "status on the sesh?"

Then Tepper: "understood. protocols remain unchanged. leather inventory and gooncave procurement confirmed."

Over the next month, I quietly watched as 21st Century America's greatest political power couple confirmed logistics and made plans for what was apparently to be an absolutely biblical freak off at Hamilton. It was only on the day of the announcement, however, that the plan became clear, when the account labelled Steven Tepper posted in Signal a "TEAM UPDATE."

I will not quote from this update, or from certain other subsequent texts. The information contained within them, if they had been read by an enemy of America or the College—the Alexander Hamilton Institute for example—could conceivably have been used to arouse American students and citizens.

According to the Tepper text, the announcement was to be made two hours hence, at 1:25 p.m. eastern time. So I waited at my desk—if this Signal chat was real, I reasoned, my email inbox would soon be bombed. At about 1:30 p.m., I checked gmail and searched Obama. There it was.

I went back to the signal chat. At 1:35 p.m., Barack had posted an update of just three emojis: an eggplant, three droplets of water, and a lip bite.

So, Hamilton College, be warned. This chat was right about the announcement—pray it isn't right about what they'll be doing after the speech.

Our Private Interview With Obama

Duel Representative: Wow, thank you so much for sitting down with us Mr. President. May I begin by asking why you're choosing to take an interview with the Duel Observer?

President Obama: I don't mind speaking on that at all. You see, I did a quick survey of Hamilton's many literary publications and deemed this paper to be the most accurate and informative. Certainly more than those fucks over at the Spectator. My apologies, Michelle is trying to get me to cut down on swearing. aside to a nearby Secret Service agent Let her know I owe her a dollar after this interview.

Duel Representative: So glad to hear that Mr. President —

President Obama: Please, Mr. President was my father. I'd like you to call me Bommie.

Duel Representative: Sorry Bommie. Glad we're being more comfortable. So why come to Hamilton?

Bommie: I thought I was scheduled to speak at Colgate. If this is Hamilton there has been a huge mistake.

Duel Representative: That makes so much more sense! Thank you for clarifying. Moving on with far more important questions, tits or ass?

Bommie: One thing that you learn when you become president of this beautiful country is that we're so much more divided than we think. Tits, ass, this is just another divider. Does an ass man not bleed the same color as a boob enjoyer? That said, I'm crazy into muscle mommy thighs. I'm always asking Michelle to absolutely crush my head in her thighs while I'm engaging in my presidential tongue workout.

Duel Representative: So glad to hear you're staying fit. We all saw the photos of you wind-surfing after your presidency completed, but are there any other sports you engaged in?

Bommie: Not that I expect you to know, but I have always been a big name in the hobby horsing community. Since 2016, I have had a lot more time on my hands to truly perfect my craft.

Duel Representative: Wow, that's really powerful. Can you show us your technique?

Bommie proceeds to unlock a long briefcase containing a hobby horse with a big unicorn horn and take a couple majestic laps around the studio, neighing occasionally

Duel Representative: Very nice. We will be sure to have some sugar cubes ready for the horse when this interview completes.

Bommie: Thank you. His name is Mitt Romneigh.

Duel Representative: Beautiful name. Almost out of time, but one more question for you Bommie. Do you have any thoughts on Hamilton President Steven Tepper?

Bommie: He's a pathetic bow-tie wearing fraud, and I will crush him in the next election.

Friday Five: Clauses in Obama's Great Names Contract

By M. Maya '27

When you're as important as our lord and savior Barack 'Super Thicc' Obama, many steps are taken to ensure your safety and wellbeing. This can include everything from stationing hunky bodyguards at every corner to adding hyper specific clauses to your contract as a way of checking it's been thoroughly read. Van Halen famously had a clause requiring a bowl of M&Ms with no brown ones for this exact reason (at least we hope it was for safety and not some other... reason). Obama, being infinitely more important than the band that made Jump, included many such clauses, as one Duel Observer writer was able to uncover. Here are a select few.

5. Obama-thong. All those who wish to interact with Obama are required to wear a white thong with Obama's face on the front for the duration. The Secret Service will hand them out and ensure they have been put on before allowing the individual to approach. Once they are finished interacting with Obama, the Secret Service will collect the underwear, bag it, and catalogue it. One can only image why Obama wants the ball sweat and pussy juice of everyone he comes in contact with.

4. Bundy drone strike. As we all know, Obama looooooves drone strikes. Therefore, as a customary greeting, Tepper must drone strike a dorm on campus. Obama is generous though. He researched the worst dorm on campus and decided Bundy West would be the Syria of this relationship. The clause did say that no warnings were permitted, but who cares? It's Bundy.

3. Obama-ganja. This one is fairly simple. The finest weed must be provided in the form of a gummy edible in the shape of his face. The expression of the gummy is up to Plants @ Hamilton. I personally hope the rizzler face is chosen.

2. Tepper smooch. As the face of Hamilton College, President Tepper must make out with President Obama sloppy style. It's not like Obama can get a kiss from just anyone—who knows what he would catch from the hockey team? So, Tepper gets to stand in for the whole campus, one second per student, faculty, and staff. Y'know, feel the love from all of campus. It's only like an hour.

1. Yaoi time. I'm actually not quite sure what this means. It says that at the end of every hour he gets 5-10 minutes of "yaoi time" alone (except for during his speech of course). When I asked other Duel writers, they all just turned pale and went "ummmmm." If anyone knows what this means, please let me know.
